Dear Mr. Chairman:

Connectivity is the key to success. What better way for citizens to succeed and for America to succeed than for all American's to have fast, free, family-friendly wireless broadband internet access?

The proposal for such access under review by the FCC is a tremendous step which will undoubtedly boost our economy and give each American family and business the chance at success. Businesses and individuals fight each and every day to become and stay successful and families are continually fighting to protect their children and homes from danger. The proposal to provide fast, free, family-friendly wireless broadband internet access is the answer we need to close the digital divide and to protect our businesses, our families and especially our children as we all use the Internet in our everyday lives.

I ask you to highly consider this proposal in front of you, as the opportunity for each American family and business to receive fast, free, family-friendly wireless internet access is vital to our success.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

Sincerely,
